HASH HISTORY

The original 'Hash House' in Kuala Lumpur, circa 1938

The Second World War put an end to the first attempts at Kuala Lumpur 'hashing', but after the war the idea gradually caught on, with people drawn to the non-competitive and social ethos of the hash. A second group was founded in Singapore in 1962 and then the movement spread throughout Europe, Australasia and America. Current estimates are that around 2000 hash groups (sometimes called 'kennels') are spread throughout all 7 continents, with most major cities boasting at least one hash group. There are many thousands of members and some clubs meet once per week, while others restrict their activities to certain times of the year. The basic idea behind a hash run is that the trail should enable the whole pack to begin and end at approximately the same time, irrespective of their running ability.**
